HIBBS BLOWS UP IN TENTH AND ST. ANN'S WINS

Local Nine Gets First Leg On
Bristol Twilight League
Cup

FINAL SCORE IS 15 TO 14

Edgely Hurler Pitched Good Ball for Nine of The
Ten Innings

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE
Result of 1st Game of Series
ST. ANN'S, 15; EDGELY, 14
(Ten Innings)

(By T. M. Juno)

The life of a baseball player—a hero one inning, a bum the next. That is the story of Leo Hibbs, of the Edgely A. C. nine as that team lost the opening game of the three-game series to determine the championship of the Bristol Twilight League. The St. Ann's team won the fray, 15-14 in a free-scoring match which went ten innings.

Hibbs, until the tenth inning was Edgely's hero of the fray. All during the game his powerhouse drives kept the Edgelys running over the plate, being responsible for ten of the visitors' runs and playing a fine defensive game. First he was stationed at third base where he handled three hard chances errorless. Later he went behind the bat and held up "Pete" Firce wonderfully and by good blocking of the plate stopped two St. Ann's runs from crossing.

Then came the fatal blunder. To open the tenth, "Charlie" Whyno, of the "Saints," doubled to left. He advanced to third on a wild pitch. Quici then hit an easy roller to Firce who threw to the plate to get Whyno. Hibbs caught the ball and while attempting to tag the runner dropped the horsehide to let the winning run cross the plate.

The large crowd that packed St. Ann's field yesterday afternoon certainly did get their money's worth. The game was full of thrill's and excitement from the first inning on and the spectators did not leave until they were certain that the game was really over. Nine times during the fray the score either was tied or the lead changed. It was anybody's game until the extra inning was played. The St. Ann's team passed up several scoring opportunities and twice runners were out at the home plate on close plays.

The winners outlast the losers, 15 to 13 and played better ball afield, having three errors, while the Edgelyites were chalked up with six. "Pete" Firce, star of the hurling corps, of the Edgely team was found for twelve of the hits, while "Jake" Tranotti who served from the second to fourth innings while Firce was resting his arm was nicked for three bingles. Firce was charged with the defeat.

"Snake" Whyno went the entire distance for the "Saints" and after the first two innings settled down to pitch an ordinary game. He would have had an easier afternoon had he been able to stop the big bludgeon of Leo Hibbs. Hibbs connected for four bingles. Two of his hits were for extra bases. His home-run in the sixth scored Benny Prant ahead of him and put the Edgelyites in the lead. He hit a double in the eleventh but it failed to do any damage. His first two singles drove in four runs while in the fifth he reached base on an error by Pico. Altogether he drove in six runs and scored four himself.

"Frankie" Dick, also did some hitting for the losers, hitting a double and two singles. Two of his hits came in the first frame when the invaders scored six runs.

"Pete" Bornice, Whyno and "Tony" Angelo with three hits each led the

WALKER READY TODAY

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Mayor James J. Walker made ready to appear on the witness stand before Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt again this afternoon at the public hearing on charges filed by Samuel Seabury, calling for his removal from office.

The mayor will be called upon to explain his business relations with Russell T. Sherwood, the missing witness at the Hoffstadter legislative inquiry whom Seabury alleges was Walker's financial agent. Seabury charges that the mayor caused nearly $1,000,000 to be deposited including $700,000 in cash by Sherwood and failed to give a satisfactory explanation of the source of the money.

Walker stoutly maintained Sherwood was not his financial agent, and that he had nothing whatever to do with Sherwood's disappearance.

There have been reports that the mayor's side contemplated summoning a number of witnesses including the mayor's wife, Edward Stanton, his former secretary, and Paul Block, the newspaper publisher who opened the joint stock trading account from which the mayor derived $246,000 in profits.

URGE THOROUGH PROBE

Harrisburg, Aug. 15.—An investigation of alleged sinister relations between the Public Service Commission and stock utility corporations even more sweeping than the probe demanded on more than one occasion by Governor Gifford Pinchot, was urged today by General Edward Martin, state treasurer and state Republican chairman.

General Martin called for an investigation to extend over the entire 17 years the commission has been in existence. The state Republican chairman's request for a "full and impartial" inquiry climaxed further revelations concerning the commission and utilities.

LINCKE'S EXPERIENCES

(This is the second of a series of four articles by Clarence Jackson Lincke, authority on Alaska, giving the rudiments of the art of extracting the yellow metal from the bed of the gold empire's streams.)

By Clarence Jackson Lincke

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
SEWARD, Alaska, Aug. 15.—(INS)—Of the hundred and twenty-five millions of souls in the domains of the United States, only an infinitesimal percentage actually play a part in the conquering of the nation's last frontier—Alaska.

If one is permitted to become opinionated, this is what is the matter with the nation: Too many are leaning upon the initiative and constructive genius of others and thus submerging individualism; too many have played butterfly and too few the squirrel which warns the frontiersman that it is time to go out and slay a moose, gather berries, take and cure fish, harvest his vegetables, and gather a full supply of wood.

It is now summer when one may travel into the Arctic and not need woollens. There are 500,000 square miles of Alaska, and its population consists of 25,000 whites and about the same number of Indians and eskimos. Even these natives affect the modern styles, and where in close proximity with the whites, copy their mode of living. Only the few live in the aboriginal state.

Time was when, to make a journey in summer was an adventure of greater moment than covering the same distance with a dog team in winter. That was before the Federal Government built roads and trails, with shelter cabins containing stoves and bunks at intervals of ten miles along the roads and trails. The pioneers of the days of 1898 poled their bateaus up alternately sluggish and rapid streams, rip-sawing the lumber and slashing their boats together with

MARRIAGE LICENSES SMASH ALL RECORDS

Depression Fails to Discourage Those Entering Into Matrimony

138 LICENSES ARE ISSUED

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 15.—While records galore were shattered at the Olympics in Los Angeles, Bucks county established a new kind of record in July when 138 marriage licenses were granted by Clerk John Thompson, of Point Pleasant, and Deputy Clerk Jacob Shelly, of Fountainville.

This is a new record for July, records at the office of the Clerk of Orphans' Court show. Last year 121 licenses were granted in July, and that was a record at that time, so that this year's mark has advanced seventeen.

"It shows that times are picking up, without a doubt," Clerk John Thompson declared when he was asked what caused the great influx of applicants in July.

It was also believed that a number of persons who had anticipated securing their licenses in June, postponed the marriage until the following month simply because more funds would be available to them.

Over 65 per cent of the 138 couples who received licenses in July were non-residents of Bucks county. Trenton and Philadelphia together furnished 132 individual applicants during the month. While the marriage license business fell off in Trenton and Philadelphia, Bucks county showed a decided increase. Rather than wait in long hot lines for their turn to get a license most of the applicants favored a trip to Doylestown where the clerks promise "no waiting, plenty of courtesy and a lot of fresh air."

During the first six months of this year, a total of 772 marriage licenses were granted at the Bucks county Court House, an increase of thirty-two licenses over the first half-year in 1931. This brings the 1932 total up until August 1, forty-nine ahead of the first seven months in 1931.

A survey of the marriage license docket for July shows that the average age of the female applicants was twenty-four, while the male applicants averaged twenty-eight, which incidentally was the same average age for the month of June.

Five nurses, six school teachers, thirteen hosiery workers, fourteen farmers, thirty-one clerks, three doctor and more than forty women without an occupation other than housework, were granted licenses here in July.

Nearly 50 per cent of the applicants who were granted licenses in July were married in Doylestown, incomplete returns indicate at this time. The marriages were performed by seven clergymen, two justices of the Peace, a county court judge and the Chief Burgess of Doylestown.

GENERAL MARTIN FAVORS ADDITIONAL TAX LEVY

Republican State Chairman
Tries to Force Adjournment Soon

WILLING TO BARTER

HARRISBURG, Aug. 15.—(INS)—General Edward Martin, Republican state chairman, today went on record in favor of levies of any kind which will permit adjournment of the special session of the legislature.

Forced to take a hand after assemblymen gave promise of being here until their terms expire in December, General Martin reversed his stand on additional taxation, and admitted his willingness to compromise.

Orders have gone out to party stalwarts to agree on any measure or set of measures which will raise $12,000,000 for county doles, and to get out of Harrisburg as quickly as possible.

A cigarette tax today seemed more certain than ever as well as levies on soft drinks and cosmetics which unlike the Federal levies on the latter two can be passed on directly to the consumer.

The cigarette measure placing an excise of one cent on 10 cigarettes, is on the calendar for second reading in the House tonight. The tobacco lobby meanwhile has marshaled forces for a determined fight to defeat it.

During the seven weeks the legislature has been in session General Martin has taken no active leadership role, and permitted various blocs to try out their own scheme at will.

Meanwhile delegates from Philadelphia and Pittsburgh joining hands with remnants of what once was a party bloc, insisted upon continuation of the system set up under the Talbot act. That group favored taxation of any kind or even putting a "closed" sign on the department of highways, and using money for food orders.

Professional welfare workers and labor leaders have crowded both Houses since the beginning of the present special session, threatening the political life of those who hold out in pyramiding more taxation upon the recently imposed federal levies.

THE NAME DOESN'T MATTER

(By "The Stroller")

Call it ping-pong or call it tennis—it's mighty enjoyable to the "kids" hereabouts.

We're speaking of the game that has been improvised here this summer. Some use their hands or a piece of wood; some choose a substitute for a net while others make use of an imaginary line; but all demand a ball.

And then the game progresses, something after the fashion of tennis, and somewhat similar to ping-pong, which after all are much the same except for location and size of "courts."

Courts in this new game may be any handy place, sidewalk, vacant lot, or sometimes a little-travelled street.

Two boys, devotees of the game, utilized two ice cream signs for a "net" a few days ago, but were forced to relinquish their "find" when the owner made the discovery.

Freil Boyd

McDEAVITT - AMISSON

The marriage of Miss Anna May DeGroot, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William DeGroot, 341 Jefferson avenue, to Charles Freil Boyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Boyd, 221 Washington street, took place at five o'clock Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents.

Rev. George E. Boswell, rector of St. James's Episcopal Church, officiated. The wedding was performed in the archway of the living rooms, which were decorated with white crepe paper festoons, and bridal bells, palms, ferns and baskets of gladioli made a colorful setting. Previous to the wedding, Miss Mary Madden, Buckley street, sang: "I Love You Truly," and "Because," accompanied by Miss Ray Vandegrift, Bath street.

The bride's attendants were Mrs. Samuel Savitz, Germantown, as matron of honor, Miss Ellen Marota, Jenkintown, bridesmaid.

William Boyd, Mansion street, a cousin of the groom, was best man, and William DeGroot, Jr., 241 Jackson street, brother of the bride, acted as usher. Lohengrin's wedding march was played by Miss Vandegrift.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attired in a gown of white Duchess lace over white satin, a model of the "Princess Period." The close fitting bodice featured a square neck line, and long tight sleeves, with puffs at the shoulder. The skirt was finished at the waist line with a girde of satin and ended in a long train.

The bridal veil of French tulle was combined with Duchess lace, which formed the cap shape head-dress, trimmed with orange blossoms. Mrs. Boyd carried an arm bouquet of white bridal roses and baby's breath.

The attendants were gowned alike, in "Princess" models of white embroidered mousseline-de-soie, made sleeveless with the square neck line. The long, tight-fitting skirts fell in graceful folds and were finished at the waistline with satin flowers of tones of red, watermelon and pink shades. Jackets featuring short puffed sleeves trimmed with ruching were worn. They wore large brimmed, white crepe hats, trimmed with watermelon colored velvet bands, and bows in the back. Watermelon colored slippers, and arm bouquets of watermelon color gladioli completed the costumes.

A small reception followed, and supper was served. Covers were laid for 50 guests. Tables were arranged on the porch which was decorated with flowers and palms.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd left Saturday evening for Atlantic City, for several days. The bride's travelling gown was a pansy-toned ensemble of silk crepe, French felt hat, of same shade and black accessories.

Upon returning they will occupy their newly-furnished home, 229 Madison street.

Mrs. Boyd was born and graduated with the class of '27, Bristol high school. She also attended Peirce Business School, and held a clerical position in the office of the Blue Moon Brewery Co.

NEW IDEAS NEEDED

The idea is the thing. An idea was back of many of today's largest fortunes and greatest enterprises, and yet an original idea is worth more today to its creator and the world than those fortunate ideas of yesterday. Your idea may be your fortune.

There is a premium on originality and ingenuity today. A large merchant observed at the market where he does his buying that the best selling ideas were the new ones, so drew the logical conclusion: "We need most of all new ideas."

Current conditions inspired this comment from a Detroit automobile manufacturer: "We have over-worked standardization. We act as if we had reached perfection when it is apparent that our products need improvement in design, in engineering and economy of manufacture and distribution."

This habit of rut business gets into of thinking things good enough and of acting on the fallacious assumption that all the good ideas have been thought of had something to do with the slowing down of business. The manufacturer thought the old methods and products were good enough. The designer was sure his first work could not be improved upon. And the merchant was satisfied with the old line until the public lost interest.

There were phenomenal successes in business and industry while the depression was at its peak. And why? Because someone conceived an original idea, knew it was a double-barreled idea and had the courage to capitalize it.

ROUT OF CANCELLATIONISTS

News from London is that Prime Minister MacDonald contemplates no war debt negotiations with the United States before the end of the year. He is wise. With the United States in the throes of a presidential election, any move on the part of the debtors looking to easing of the war debts would be a blunder of gigantic proportions.

How the next move of the cancellationists concerning the war debts—and such a move is certain to be made after the election, observers believe—is received on these shores remains to be seen. The Democratic platform declares flatly against cancellation of the war debts, and President Hoover is known to be opposed to any such course. The "united front" on the issue that has been threatened by America's debtors has had the effect of solidifying sentiment against further lenience to them.

The way for revisionists and cancellationists has been made harder by the bungling at the recent Lausanne conference. To await a more favorable opportunity to press their claims appears to be the only course now open to them.

"MURDER of the NIGHT CLUB LADY"

THE NEW THATCHER COLT DETECTIVE MYSTERY

BY ANTHONY ABBOT

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY COWLEY-FRIEDLE INC., DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Lola Carewe, "The Night Club Lady", is mysteriously murdered in her penthouse apartment at three o'clock New Year's morning. An hour later, the body of Lola's guest, Christine Quiles, is found in Lola's room. Christine had been killed first and her body hidden. Dr. Hugh Baldwin attributes both deaths due to heart failure. Guy Everett, Christine's New Year's Eve escort, claims he brought her home at 12:15 and then went riding, alone, on the Motor Parkway. Mrs. Carewe, Lola's mother, denies seeing Christine return. Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt discounts District Attorney Dougherty's theory that Lola was killed by a jewel thief ring she headed and that Christine met the same fate for knowing too much. Vincent Rowland, Lola's lawyer, discloses that Everett loved Lola and was jealous of Dr. Baldwin. The police are on the trail of Christine's brother, Edgar, who left his Rochester home for New York after receiving a telegram New Year's Eve. Christine was to have inherited wealth shortly. Dr. Multooler, the medical examiner, contradicts Dr. Baldwin's statement that heart failure caused the deaths. A strap picked up in Lola's room evidently caused the bruise on Christine's neck—after death. Everett confesses he lied about riding on the Motor Parkway. He states Christine told him she had discovered a plot to murder Lola and feared for her own life because of her knowledge, adding that Dr. Baldwin was involved. The picture of the young man found in Lola's room is identified by the Paris Prefect of Police as that of Basil Boucher, a young bank clerk, who met a dancer named Lola in Paris, robbed a bank to buy her a ruby, and then disappeared. Basil's parents sold medical laboratory specimens. Professor Luckner, a scientist, finds a scorpion's antenna—the instrument of death—among the particles of dust garnered from Lola's room. Colt is puzzled as there were no punctures on the bodies. Luckner calls the Commissioner's attention to Lola's robe.

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

THE microscope was placed over a part of the innards of that bisected sleeve. Colt bent down and gave a turn to the screw of the instrument. A low exclamation escaped him.

"I see two dried red spots—of blood?"

"You are right, Herr Commissioner!"

"Then—the scorpion was in the sleeve?"

"I believe that, too—"

"But the bathrobe was put on wrong—"

"I know nothing of that."

"Of course, it was! And the scorpion had to be in the sleeve—"

"Ah!" cried Professor Luckner, "if that were so, the scorpion would make frantic efforts to escape—most surely it would bite—"

With a handkerchief, Thatcher Colt wiped moisture from his brow.

"Professor—how could a person obtain such a scorpion? I must know that."

The professor gave a demure wink.

"One could go to Durango and look in the cellars of old houses," he suggested with an enormous chuckle. "But otherwise, it would be—well, very difficult to obtain such a scorpion."

"But it could be done?"

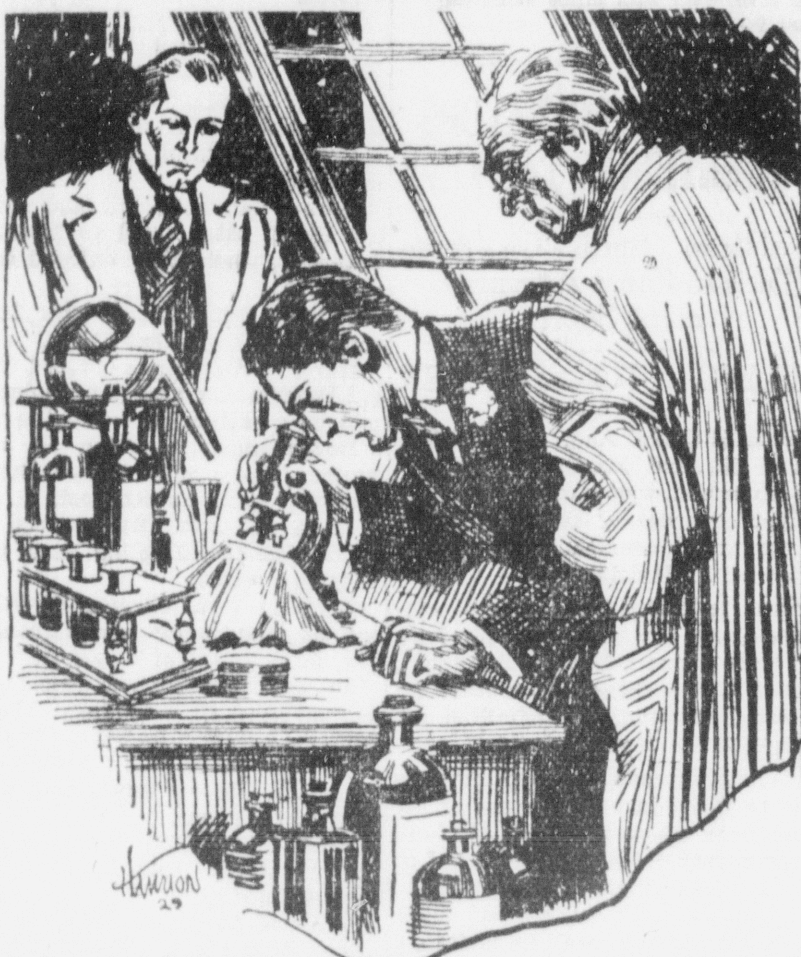

"Oh, yes, if one were connected with a university laboratory—a biologist or a medical research man—they could arrange it."

"But how?"

"Through supply houses who keep the research laboratories stocked with necessary insects, birds—all sorts of living creatures. Did I ever tell you the story—"

Colt laid his hand lightly on the old professor's elbow.

"The police have to travel fast, professor. I have sent an agent already to call on these supply houses!"

"Ja wohl! But how? Are you a mind-reader?"

"I am a very reassured Professor Luckner and thanked him profusely. Colt led the way back to our car. Sitting with military erectness in the back seat, he deliberately filled his pipe and lighted it. Then he said:

"It would be possible for a medical man to get that scorpion. The only marks found on Lola's body were the punctures of a hypodermic needle—made by a medical man."

"But the analysis showed the solution was harmless," I remonstrated.

Colt's nod was infinitely sad.

"Right. But do you remember how Doctor Baldwin as he stood beside Lola reached across her body to lift up the arm that was farthest from him? Why? Suppose he did that strange action because he knew the bite of the scorpion was already there—"

"And he put the point of the hypodermic needle through that bite?" I gasped.

"It could have been done," said Thatcher Colt. "I am not ready to say that it was done. But I do want to have a few words with Doctor Baldwin. We have one telephone call to make and then—"

Colt gave directions to the chauffeur to take us to that haunted apartment building where Doctor Baldwin's office was under the same roof with Lola Carewe's home.

The telephone call was made from a drug-store on a corner of Amsterdam Avenue, one block west. Colt wanted the latest reports from his office before tackling Doctor Baldwin.

Flynn was at Headquarters, bursting with eagerness to talk with the chief. It was only a brief talk, but the facts given to Colt were indeed disturbing.

The first was that no employee of the North Star speakery could remember having seen Guy Everett in the resort on New Year's Eve. No attendant had opened the grilled iron door to admit the actor, the coat-girl did not remember taking his coat, and no waiter would admit to having served him.

Furthermore, additional inquiries made in the apartment house where Doctor Baldwin made his home, opened a fascinating new field for speculation. It was known that late in the previous evening Mrs. Baldwin had a visitor—a man whom no attendant recognized and who had remained with Mrs. Baldwin until a late hour!

"And further," added Flynn, "you know how I sent a man out to the medical laboratory supply houses. Well—I got something hot. Doctor Baldwin has been buying bugs—poisonous—scorpions—"

"Will they swear to that?" rasped Colt suddenly.

"Sure—a fellow there named Villafraña—he sold Baldwin a fresh one this morning!"

"Hold on to him!" exclaimed Colt. "I'll talk with you later."

In solemn silence, Thatcher Colt hurried back to the car. Back toward Morningside Heights we hurried. But now a change had come over town and sky, as, indeed, a change had come into my own suspicion-haunted brain. When we had entered the drug-store to telephone, we had left behind us crisp, yellow sunshine. Fifteen minutes later the light and warmth of the winter morning were gone. We were embraced in a damp plague of fog.

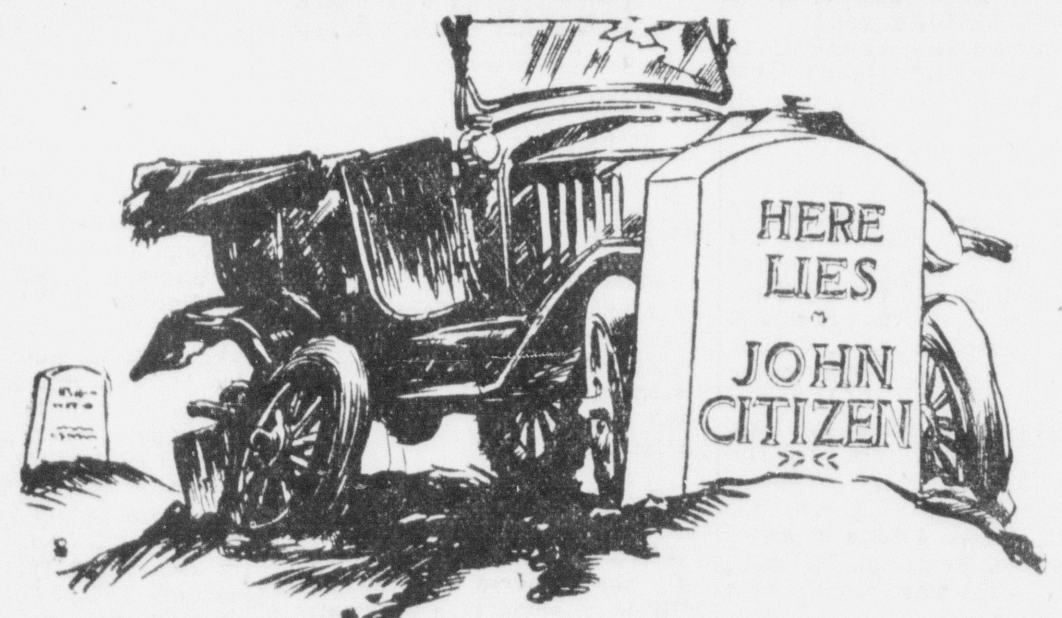

I felt gloomy and depressed, and without sensible reason, except the fatigue of our long and unabated efforts. Seemingly we were coming nearer to our quarry, and working with multiplying clues. Yet my dependency increased as our car rolled down the steep slope of Morningside Heights. On we hurried, past the little French cathedral—Eglise de Notre Dame—with its Virgin in a rocky niche over the altar, surrounded by the flames of a thousand candles, and decked about with crutches of persons miraculously healed. The sight of it seemed to me infinitely tragic and forlorn, and this impression deepened as we scurried by St. Luke's Hospital, and Gabriel blowing his long trumpet over the seven chapels of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. Down under the roaring bridge of the elevated at One Hundred and Tenth Street raced our police car, while the shattered-proof glass of the car windows became obscured with a coating of silver mist that made of the car's interior a chamber of isolation, a compartment of reflection rolling on balloon tires.

I looked at Thatcher Colt. He was refilling his pipe. He looked at me with a lightly amused air that hid, I knew, a deep crisis of excitement.

"Safety First" Take that Clunk off the Road

WHICH?

Your Unsafe Car
In The Junk--Yard
or a Victim
In The Graveyard

IF you had to make the decision today you know what your answer would be.

And yet that is the jeopardy with which every man drives an unsafe car . . . a car with insecure brakes; with tires on the verge of collapse; with unreliable steering gear; with bad lights. And where is the percentage? Take a life and it will cloud all your future with horror and regret. Heavy damage suits will far exceed the cost of a new car or complete repairs. Prison or your own life may pay the penalty.

What a prospect against the saving of a few paltry dollars.

Bristol auto dealers will be pleased to sell you a new car or an approved second-hand one. Read carefully their advertisements in the Courier.

WILL MEET TO FORM BOWLING LEAGUE HERE

Bristol Bowling Association, sponsors of the Bristol Bowling League, will hold the first meeting of the 1932-33 season tomorrow night at 8.30 in No. 1 fire house, Wood and Market streets. All members of the association are urgently requested to be present, and any person interested in this indoor winter sport is cordially invited to attend.

The Bristol Recreation Center, home of the league, will open September 1st under the management of Joseph Amis, Sr., the new proprietor. "Joe" is known to every bowling fan in this section of the country and was one of the pioneers in organizing the Bristol League in 1925, when the sport was actively revived. "Joe" promises to give to Bristol an interesting season and the officers of the association would like to see the members cooperate with the new manager by making a good showing at the meeting tomorrow evening.

Invitations have been sent to fire companies in Bristol, Edgely, Tullytown, Croydon, Newportville, Hulmeville, South Langhorne and Cornwells, also various other organizations, to attend, and if possible a new league will be organized.

Considerable business is scheduled to be transacted at this meeting—election of officers, change of rules and operations, also enrollment of teams. The latter is very important as it is not definitely known if all teams entered last season will be active again this year; if not, new teams will be accepted for entry in the Bristol League.

The league will open on September 12th, and captains are requested to submit the nights of the week which they desire not to be scheduled to play.

Kuser Again Gets Crown In Trenton Tennis Event

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 15.—Fred (Fritz) Kuser, seven times kingpin of Trenton tennis players, celebrated his return to municipal play after a lapse of two years by conquering Bob Boyd in the championship match at the Cadwalader Park courts Saturday, but only after one of the most stubbornly-contested matches in city tennis annals.

Boyd, who bowed to Kuser in straight sets just after he had graduated from the junior ranks four years ago, was a more serious threat Saturday and submitted only after five hard played sets, 5-7, 6-8, 7-5, 6-3, 6-3.

An enthusiastic throng which numbered nearly 500 witnessed the two-hour-and-a-half conflict.

QUITS TOMORROW

Bristol Quoit Club will go to Merchantville, N. J., tomorrow evening to play a game. The localities will leave here at 7.15 sharp.

Miss Marie Wheeler, of Mansion street, has returned after a sight-seeing tour through Canada and New York State.

Hibbs Blows Up in Tenth And St. Ann's Wins

St. Ann's hitters. Fields and Juno had two hits apiece. Praul and Dugan got two each for the losers. Quici, Juno and Pieo played fine ball as field for the winners.

The game started out with a fine chance for Edgely. Six runs crossed the plate in the first and another in the second, giving them a 7-0 lead before the "Saints" received their second wind, giving them a 7-0 before the "Saints" received their second bat.

Two were out when the St. Ann's hits began to whistle off the bats and before the second inning was over, the score was tied and "Pete" Firce had left the mound and Tranotti took up the pitching.

Three more runs in the third gave St. Ann's a 10-7 lead but Edgely came back in the fourth and evened it up at ten all. Firce took up pitching for the Edgelyites again in the fourth and blanked the St. Ann's team in their turn. The first half winners went into the lead in the fifth, scoring two. But St. Ann's came right back to even it up again.

Edgely again took up the lead in the eighth, scoring twice to bring their total to fourteen. But not to be outdone, the "Saints" came right back to tie it up and had a chance to win the game but the winning run was nailed at the plate. Neither team scored the run which won the game.

The next game of the series will be played at Edgely.

"There is no such thing any more," he answered. "There are weddings performed at all hours of the day and night for it is possible to secure a license in Doylestown at any time, and a three-o'clock-in-the-morning wedding is not an unusual thing in Doylestown."

Sixteen men and fifteen women made their second matrimonial venture in July. The docket shows that licenses were granted in June to twenty-six divorced people.

Better Chance To Find Gold In Alaska Now

spruce roots or raw-hide; building frames and covering them with moosehide; mayhap traveling a thousand miles on a crude raft through unknown waters. It was in accepting the dare and the adventure and romance following which lashed them on as it did the pioneer builders of the nation.

Pioneer conditions make for honesty. In the absence of the wolfishness of modern society and the urge to tricks and chicanery, the average insubordinate member of society finds himself losing his penchant for unfair dealing with his neighbor. If not, he is impressed with the necessity for such conduct by about a dozen grim-visaged men trailing 50 feet of rope toward a convenient limb. But that was before the coming of law and order, racketeers, profiteers and what have you?

However, the old traditions prevail for the most part, especially far beyond the urban centers and means of transportation. These traditions serve to hold the waster and criminal in close proximity where his talents offer the best opportunity for employment and the minimum of punishment under the safeguards provided in our two billion statutes.

With respect to opportunities for obtaining gold, either placer or lode, they are more numerous today than they were in the days of 1898, Yukon save with the respect to known rich deposits such as those of Dawson, Yukon Territory, Dominion of Canada. (One would be surprised at the number of business letters addressed to "Dawson, Alaska." The World's Almanac thus denotes it.)

But discovering gold is fraught with the same degree of energy as is required in any other line of business, and commands almost as much knowledge. Usually the man with a working knowledge of geology is the first to uncover a gold deposit, placer or lode. The mob follows. Example offers an opportunity to gain the rudimentary knowledge of how to extract it. It is not picked from the ground as one would gather nuts, but is recovered from the lowest level of the rocks and gravels in the bed of an active stream or where a stream once flowed, but was shifted by some movement of the earth in its infancy.

To determine if there is gold present it is necessary to dig a hole. If water is inclined to fill the hole, a ditch is started downstream and in the course of time will touch bedrock, this time being governed by the depth of the gravel and the gradient of the bedrock. Then it is necessary to utilize water to sluice off the overburden and bring the gold to a thin layer of sand and gravel on the bedrock. Sluiceways are then set up and the fines are tossed in with a shovel.

After the pit is cleaned up, the material in the sluice box is panned, by which the gold is separated and put into the poke. A teaspoonful of gold extracted daily will give a return of from $17 to $20 according to fineness. Stack up ten single eagles and note its dimensions and one appreciates how little of the shiny stuff is required to make $100.

A shoveler can toss ten feet square of gravel one foot in depth into the sluiceway in a day. If each square foot contains 10 cents he has $10 for his poke.

As this is written for the benefit of the thousands of inquirers who yearn for an opportunity to escape their thralldom and "return to Mother Nature," a little personal experience which will serve as a concise example of what a man coming to the frontier may expect, seems apropos.

We will leave the summer with its 20 to 24 hours of daylight, alternate sunny skies and rains, and plunge into midwinter prepared to stampede to some spot known to contain placer gold. I anticipate duplicating this next winter, but under more favorable conditions than those attending my first "rush" of 75 miles conveying my necessities on a sled drawn by five malamutes. For that reason I have improved what would have been tedious hours following the production of an eight-page daily newspaper, by emulating my compers of the wild places.

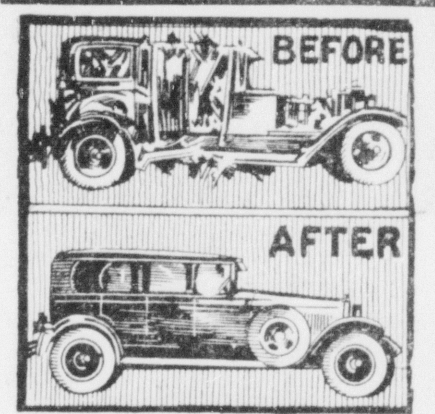

An old fisherman taught me to knit a net. Like "granny" when the dinner dishes are stacked and all gather about the fireplace, I devoted a few hours each evening to knitting a 60-foot trout net, made boats from old life preservers and sinkers from linotype metal. Incidentally I knitted a 20-foot large-mesh salmon net.

When the ice thawed and opened a nearby stream last spring, I took an afternoon off and cast my net. My reward was two soap-boxes full of 18-inch trout. They are now reposing in a barrel, where I salted them after a fisherman had taught me how.

Then came the big red salmon run, just five miles out. The creek is six feet wide and one foot deep. No one could miss a six-to-ten-pound salmon with a gaff hook. One evening and night by the stream and I had 200 pounds of salmon split and hanging upon racks made from nearby poles. After two days of sun I hauled them in by automobile, built a little frame, covered it with canvas, immersed my salmon in strong brine for one-half hour, hung them on the tiers above a coal oil can filled with dead willow, touched a match and waited three days until the fish were properly cured and ready to be baled and stowed away for feeding my dogs next winter.

"Wait Until Next Year!"
—By HARDIN BURNLEY—

JEAN BOROTRA—HERO OF THE RECENT DAVIS CUP MATCHES—HIS WIN OVER VINES SAVED THE CUP FOR FRANCE—

BUT—THE SET-BACK WHICH COCHET SUFFERED AT THE HANDS OF VINES SEEMS TO INDICATE THAT FRANCE WILL LOSE THE TROPHY NEXT YEAR!

HENRI COCHET

VINES—AND—ALLISON—THE U.S. STARS MADE A GALLANT STAND AND ON THEIR SHOWING SEEM SURE TO WIN THE CUP IN 1933.

IN spite of the fact that the American Davis cup team failed—by the narrowest of margins—in the attempt to win back the most famous of tennis trophies from the French defenders, the recent matches at Paris showed clearly that next year it will be another story.

Ellsworth Vines' great victory over the famed Cochet was the tip-off. When the gangling California net marvel came from behind to literally blast the great little Frenchman off the court with his terrific smashes, the death knell was sounded for France's 1933 Davis cup chances.

It became all the more evident that this will be the last year of French tennis supremacy when Jean Borotra announced immediately after the recent matches that he had positively played in his last Davis cup singles.

The popular Jean, idol of the French tennis fans, is no longer young as tennis players go, and he cannot stand the strain of the grueling Davis cup singles competition. Borotra's wonderful victories over both Vines and Allison made him the hero of the recent cup matches; but as he himself said later, "It was a miracle that I lasted through the two matches, and miracles happen only once in a lifetime."

The American doubles team, Allison and Van Ryn, proved themselves the best in the world when they won from the veteran French pair, Cochet and Brugnon; and next year they should find victory in the Davis cup doubles even easier, since the Frenchmen are both apparently on the down grade.

Wilmer Allison, the slim Texan, was a real hero in spite of the fact that he lost both his singles matches.

Wilmer ran into a lot of tough luck. Rather frail of physique and possessing none too much stamina, he was forced to play in both singles and doubles because of the collapse of Frank Shields' game, and he certainly did himself proud. In that crucial match with Borotra he had the Frenchman at match point, only to be deprived of victory by a doubtful decision on the part of a linesman, who called one of Borotra's serves good, although the great majority of onlookers believed it to be out.

As for the sensational Vines, his wonderful playing in the last three sets of the Cochet match definitely established him as a worthy successor to Tilden. In that match he showed the French some of the greatest tennis ever seen, and his game is improving every day!
